Coastside Fire Protection District Background

Firefighting and emergency services on the coastside can trace its origins back to the nineteenth century when local Half Moon Bay citizen volunteers banded together to combat fires using limited equipment and money. Over the next several decades gradual changes and improvements were made. Fire hydrants were installed, a fire district was formed, fire apparatus were purchased, and fire stations were built. The first professional firefighter was hired in 1944, and later paramedic and ambulance service was established. In 2007 the Half Moon Bay Fire District merged with the Point Montara Fire District to form the current Coastside Fire Protection District.

The Coastside Fire Protection District (District) is an independent special district with a five-member Board of Directors. Each member is elected for a four-year term. The majority of District revenue is derived from local property taxes, and a base parcel fee of thirty-five dollars. Private audits are performed annually and are available for public review.

The District serves a population of approximately thirty thousand residents from Devils Slide to south of Half Moon Bay. Twenty-four hour a day emergency services are provided from three fire stations. Each station is staffed by professional firefighters, with at least one of them functioning as a paramedic. Additional valuable support is provided by an active Volunteer Firefighter organization. Ambulance service is provided by American Medical Response and is administrated through a Joint Powers Authority (JPA) comprised of all the fire departments in San Mateo County. The District responds to over two thousand calls for service each year.

Duties and responsibilities have necessarily expanded beyond fire prevention and suppression and today include cliff and water rescue, vegetation management, wildland firefighting, public education, natural disaster preparation, accident and health emergencies, new construction permitting, business inspections, and other public safety services.

This 2014 Strategic Business Plan was proposed and approved by the Board of Directors of the District. Its purpose is first, to clarify and update the mission of the District, provide a vision of expected future performance and establish a set of values, which will guide District action. Second, the plan identifies priorities and necessary actions to be undertaken by the District over the next seven years.
